Shan (Jessica) Chen is an experienced bilingual attorney and mediator. With over 10 years of legal experience working in a broad range of practice areas, Shan's practice focuses on cross-border and domestic commercial litigation, business transactions, international trade and arbitration, insurance and subrogation, alternative dispute resolution, art law, corporate law, financial services and compliance, immigration law, employment law, and real estate law.

Born and raised in China and bilingual in Chinese and English, Shan possesses a deep understanding of the Chinese business culture, customs, and etiquette, which provides her with a natural advantage and unique set of skills when representing China-based businesses and individuals doing business and prospering in the US, as well as American businesses exploring the Chinese market and thriving in China. Shan takes on her clients' problems as her own and strives to solve the legal issues strategically and efficiently by leveraging a broad skillset, aiming to deliver her clients the most favorable results possible.

As a certified court interpreter at both federal and state levels, with about 20 years of translation and interpretation experience, Shan has been providing services to Department of Justice, USCIS, ICE, U.S. District Courts, NYS Unified Court System, District Attorney's Offices, law firms, corporations, international conferences, and international trade fairs. In addition to her Juris Doctor degree, Shan holds a master's degree in human resources and industrial relations from one of the top three programs in the US. Shan is also a public notary in New York and New Jersey as well as a licensed real estate broker in the state of New York.
